

Tim AMOS QC

Barrister 1987 call, QC 2008

Tim has practised at Queen Elizabeth Building (QEB) in London throughout his career. Educated at Oxford University and the University of Westminster (formerly Central London Polytechnic), Tim's practice spans all aspects of family law. He is predominantly known as an expert in "big money" family finance cases and increasingly for his international expertise. He is fluent in German (including legal German) and has good professional French. Tim is invited to speak at legal conferences in both languages as well as English.

From 2001-2008 Tim held the position of Standing Counsel to the Queen's Proctor. This is a government appointment, in parallel with continuing private practice, to advise the Treasury Solicitor on all matters of family law with a public interest element, including the validity of foreign marriages and divorces. Tim completed his tenure of this appointment on being sworn in as a QC in March 2008.

Tim was the first ever Collaborative Family Law QC at the English Bar. He is also a part-time deputy judge (Recorder) and a Mediator (English and German). In collaborative work Tim acts as a Single Joint Expert in law. In litigation he also offers private-judging, particularly private hearings of Financial Dispute Resolution appointments ("FDR"s).
